3. Use creative problem-solving in business activities/decisions.
4. Assess start-up requirements.
5. Assess risks associated with venture.

EVENT SITUATION

You are to assume the role of a young entrepreneur looking to open a mobile app development company called APPINNOVATE. Your company will specialize in creating custom mobile apps for small businesses that are looking to enhance their online presence and connect with tech-savvy customers through mobile platforms.

In your city of 500,000 residents, the business environment is thriving, and many small businesses are recognizing the need to go digital but lack the resources or knowledge to create a professional mobile app. You see this as a huge opportunity to offer a valuable service to local businesses while also building a scalable company that can grow beyond your city.

You have a meeting with a potential investor (judge) who is interested in your business idea but wants more information before committing to funding. Specifically, the investor (judge) has asked you to explain:

- The market demand
- Your planned revenue model
- Growth potential
- Investment needed

You will present this information to the investor (judge) in a meeting at their office. The investor (judge) will begin the role-play by greeting you and asking for more details about your venture. After you have presented the information and answered the investor's (judge's) questions, the meeting will conclude with the investor (judge) thanking you for your time.

Possible Judge's Questions:

1. What unique value propositions did you emphasize to differentiate APPINNOVATE from other competitors in the mobile app development space?
2. How would you mitigate risks or challenges associated with the mobile app development process?
