EVENT SITUATION

You are to assume the role of a marketing manager for FRESH BITE, a company that specializes in healthy meal kits and organic food products. The chief marketing officer (judge) has tasked you with developing a new product line aimed at busy professionals seeking convenient, healthy meal options.

FRESH BITE has a strong reputation for its high-quality, organic ingredients and a variety of meal kits that cater to different dietary preferences, including vegan, gluten-free, and paleo. Currently, the company offers meal kits that require some preparation, but they want to launch a new line of ready-to-eat meals that can be heated in minutes, appealing to the growing market of health-conscious consumers who lack time to cook.

The chief marketing officer (judge) wants you to:

- Identify the target market for the new ready-to-eat meal line.
- Determine the pricing strategy for these meals, considering the premium nature of the ingredients.
- Outline the key selling points that will differentiate these meals from both FRESH BITE's existing products and competitors in the ready-to-eat market.

You will present your ideas to the chief marketing officer (judge) in a role-play that takes place in the chief marketing officer's (judge's) office. The chief marketing officer (judge) will start the role-play by welcoming you and asking you to share your ideas. After your presentation and questions, the chief marketing officer (judge) will conclude the role-play by thanking you for your insights.

Possible Judge's Questions:

1. What factors did you consider when determining the pricing strategy for the new ready-to-eat meals?
2. What are the unique features or benefits of the new meal line that will set it apart from both FRESH BITE's existing products and those of competitors?
