EVENT SITUATION

You are to assume the role of the marketing manager for the SILVER OAK COLLEGE ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT. Silver Oak College is a small NCAA Division III institution located in a suburban area with a student population of approximately 1,200. The athletic department oversees 15 sports programs, with an average attendance of 150-200 spectators per game, indicating a need to boost engagement and attendance.

SILVER OAK COLLEGE is planning to launch a new mobile app designed to enhance the experience of students, parents, and fans by providing real-time updates on games, player stats, schedules, and ticket sales.

The athletic director (judge) is seeking your expertise to develop a promotional strategy that not only generates excitement for the app launch but also encourages downloads among students, parents, and local community members. Additionally, the plan should incorporate ways to promote local businesses through the app, creating a mutually beneficial relationship between the college and the surrounding community.

You have been asked to present a detailed marketing plan that generates buzz around the app launch, increases app downloads among students, parents, and community members, and promotes local businesses through the app.

You will present your ideas to the athletic director (judge) in a meeting that will take place in their office. The athletic director (judge) will begin the role-play by asking you for your promotional strategy. After your presentation and Q&A session, the athletic director (judge) will conclude by thanking you for your insights.

Possible Judge's Questions:

1. What key performance indicators (KPIs) will you track to assess the effectiveness of your promotional campaign and app engagement post-launch?
2. Beyond the initial launch, how do you plan to keep the app relevant and continuously engage users throughout the sports season and beyond?
