EVENT SITUATION

You are to assume the role of an operations assistant at BRIDGEPORT FREIGHT, a regional trucking and warehouse company with 300 employees. A new warehouse associate (judge) wants your advice on building a career with the company.

The warehouse associate (judge) is 19 and was hired three months ago to load and unload trucks. The associate (judge) likes the company but thinks warehouse work is a dead end. During a break, the associate (judge) mentioned that the dispatchers, office staff and managers “all seem to have better jobs” but has no idea how anyone got there. Several of BRIDGEPORT’s current managers started out in the warehouse.

The associate (judge) has asked you to explain the kinds of jobs that exist at a company like BRIDGEPORT, how people typically move up, what skills would help the associate (judge) advance and how to set goals to get there.

You will present the information to the warehouse associate (judge) in the break room. The associate (judge) will begin the conversation by greeting you and asking for advice. After you have presented the information and answered the associate’s (judge’s) questions, the associate (judge) will conclude the conversation by thanking you for your help.

Possible Judge's Questions:

1. How long does it usually take to get promoted, and what can I do to speed that up?
2. How do I let my supervisor know I want to advance without sounding like I don't like my current job?
