EVENT SITUATION

You are to assume the role of the owner of STITCH & SCRIPT, a custom embroidery shop that makes team uniforms, school spirit wear and corporate apparel. Your part-time bookkeeper (judge) has suggested changes to the financial statements before you meet with a potential investor next week.

The investor is interested in putting $40,000 into STITCH & SCRIPT so you can buy a second embroidery machine. The investor has asked to see your most recent financial statements.

To make the business “look stronger,” the bookkeeper (judge) suggests two changes:

- Count a $12,000 deposit from a school district as revenue this month, even though the order won’t be made or delivered until spring.
- Leave the $9,000 remaining balance on your current embroidery machine loan off the balance sheet, because “it’ll be paid off in a year anyway.”

The bookkeeper (judge) means well and doesn’t see the harm.

You will explain to the bookkeeper (judge) why you won’t make these changes and how you’ll present the business honestly and still make a strong case to the investor. The role-play takes place in the shop’s office. The bookkeeper (judge) will begin the role-play by asking about the financial statements. After you have explained and have answered the bookkeeper’s (judge’s) questions, the bookkeeper (judge) will conclude the role-play by thanking you for your work.

Possible Judge's Questions:

1. What could actually happen to us legally if the numbers aren't accurate?
2. What does the balance sheet tell the investor that the other statements don't?
