EVENT SITUATION

You are the supervisor at FRESH START CAFE, a busy local coffee shop. One of your employees (judge), who has been working at the café for several months, is excellent at customer service but struggles with the cash register, particularly when it comes to handling complex transactions like processing returns or applying discounts. As a result, there have been occasional errors in their cash handling, and you've noticed some frustration when dealing with these tasks.

The employee (judge) has requested a meeting with you to discuss their challenges and improve their skills at the register. They express their desire to grow in the company but feel they need more support and training to feel confident in handling these transactions.

You will explain to the employee (judge) that professional development is a key part of growing within the café and that improving their register skills is an important step for them to take on more responsibility. You will outline a plan for additional training, such as practicing with a supervisor on real-life scenarios, shadowing an experienced cashier, or reviewing the café's transaction policies and procedures.

Additionally, you will discuss how improving these skills could open up opportunities for the employee to take on more shifts, train new employees, or move into a supervisory position in the future.

The employee (judge) will begin the role-play by asking for your advice on improving their register skills. After you've shared the plan for their professional development and answered their questions, the employee (judge) will conclude the role-play by thanking you for your guidance.

Possible Judge's Questions:

1. How can I practice handling complex transactions in a way that feels less overwhelming, especially when I'm under pressure during busy times?
2. How will the café support me in tracking my progress as I work on improving my register skills and moving towards a supervisory role?
