EVENT SITUATION

You are to assume the role of the owner of BRIGHT IDEAS, a small business that designs and sells custom t-shirts for local events and fundraisers. Recently, one of your team members (judge) has been reluctant to collaborate with others on group tasks. This behavior has created tension within the team, as the team member (judge) often works independently and avoids engaging in brainstorming sessions or joint projects. Other employees have expressed frustration, stating that the team member (judge) does not contribute ideas or support the team's collective efforts, which has impacted the overall morale and productivity of the group.

Your manager has noticed the issue and asked you to speak with the team member (judge) privately to address the situation. During this conversation, you must help the team member understand the importance of teamwork, encourage them to share their concerns, and inspire them to re-engage with the group in a positive way.

You will meet with the team member (judge) in the design studio. The team member (judge) will begin the role-play by mentioning they feel uncomfortable working with others. After you have addressed their concerns and provided advice, the team member (judge) will conclude the role-play by thanking you for the conversation.

Possible Judge's Questions:

1. How can I express my independence and individuality if the group does not want to listen to my ideas?
2. Why should I share my ideas with others if they always disregard them and ultimately hurt the company?
